I have serious environmental concerns about the Nordic Aquafarm project in Belfast. As a longtime lobster fisherman in upper Penobscot Bay I catch Codfish in my lobster traps. They are young fish and are evidence that there is still spawning going on in inshore waters. Edward Ames mapped out Cod and Haddock spawning grounds in Penobscot Bay and they extend far up into the upper bay. We have completed a dam removal project and have improving runs of River Herring, and have Codfish that feed on them. I hope that we can allow the natural process of resource recovery occur without introducing millions of gallons of warm, polluted wastewater. Thank you, Lawrence Moffet
